A voice note is the closest thing to being in the room. It cuts through a wall of text and makes a fan feel chosen, because you took the time to speak to him. These scripts tell you exactly what to say when you hit record. Keep them short (10 to 25 seconds), use his name, and smile while you talk, it carries.

Welcome voice note

Send within the first day. Instant connection.

hey [name], it's actually me. i wanted to say thank you for being here properly, not just in text. tell me a bit about you, okay? talk soon.

PPV tease voice note

Say less than the caption. Let your voice do the selling.

so... i just sent you something and i'm a little nervous about it. promise you'll open it? i want to know what you think.

i couldn't type this one out, it felt better to just tell you: what i just sent is exactly what i was thinking about you. go look.

Good morning voice note morning [name]. still in bed, still a little sleepy, and you're the first person i wanted to talk to. have a good day, okay?

Re-engage voice note

hey you. i realized i'd rather just talk to you than send another boring message, so here i am. i miss our chats. come back and tell me everything.

How to record ones that convert

- Keep it 10-25 seconds. Long voice notes get skipped.
- Use his name in the first three seconds.
- Smile while you talk. It changes your tone completely.
- End on a question so he has a reason to reply.

- Record somewhere quiet. Background noise kills the intimacy.
